Acute Hepatitis B: In the last several weeks, two cases of acute hepatitis B have been reported in at-risk individuals over age 30 years, an age group not likely to have been vaccinated against hepatitis B in childhood.

The average hepatitis B incubation period is 60-90 days (range 45-180 days). It is spread through contact with blood and sexual fluids from infected persons such as might occur during unprotected sex or sharing drug-injection equipment such as needles, cookers, spoons, and cotton.

Symptoms may include fever, fatigue, nausea, no appetite, jaundice, stomach pain, and vomiting but some people may have no symptoms.

At-risk people should get tested and assessed for vaccination with hepatitis A and B vaccines.
